Choosing the best balcony plants by sunlight

Successful balcony gardening depends on matching plant species with the intensity and duration of daily natural light. Balconies typically fall into three lighting categories, each suited to specific plant varieties:

South and West-facing balconies receive intense, direct sunlight for most of the day. Plants suited for these conditions thrive in high heat and require deep containers with good drainage.

Best Choices: Bougainvillea, Hibiscus, Marigolds, Portulaca (Moss Rose), Adenium (Desert Rose), and Aloe Vera Care Tip: Water deeply early in the morning or late evening to prevent immediate evaporation from the soil.

Partial Sun / Morning Light (3 to 5 Hours Daily Light)

East-facing balconies enjoy gentle morning sunlight followed by soft afternoon shade. This mild environment supports flowering plants, herbs, and semi-tolerant greenery without scorching their leaves.

National media conference with 1,600 journalists adopts 7-point action plan; demand for a national media council

RAMESH RAY
Hello Kolkata

Over 1,600 media professionals attended the five-day National Media Conference at the Brahma Kumaris' Mansarovar complex, concluding with the unanimous adoption of a sweeping 7-point Action Plan. Centered on the theme "Empowered Media for Building a Better World," the summit culminated in a valedictory session urging the industry to look past surface-level societal conflicts and broadcast actionable, solution-oriented news.

Presented by Sis. BK Sarala, Vice-Chairperson of the Media & PR Wing, and seconded by prominent educators Prof. Mansingh Parmar and Prof. Sanjay Dwivedi, the resolution outlines a strategic roadmap to restore journalistic integrity. A core mandate is a formal call to establish a National Media Council to resolve press issues across various media forms. Additionally, the plan demands expanded media literacy to combat rising digital negativity and transform passive consumers into responsible digital citizens. The document asserts that structural regulations and technological fact-checking tools are insufficient without the inner spiritual empowerment of creators, while committing media organizations and partnering public relations networks to launch targeted initiatives promoting peace, equality, sustainability, and social unity.

Addressing the mental toll of modern reporting, Dr. Vikas Singh, Dean of AAFT Noida Film City, highlighted industry pressures. Bro. Umanath Singh, Senior Editor at Prasar Bharti News Service, New Delhi, acknowledged the challenge of contemplating peace during global conflict, praising efforts to build spiritual resilience within the press. Highlighting cross-border unity, Sis. Mala Kumari Kam, Editor of Kalyanpost Daily Paper in Nepal, emphasized that journalism must preserve people-to-people relationships that transcend international borders.

Delivering valedictory blessings, Rajyogini BK Mohini Didi, Administrative Head of Brahma Kumaris, outlined four pillars of a fortunate life: mastering thought power, maintaining physical vibrations of peace despite anxieties, utilizing wealth correctly, and cultivating universal friendship by viewing everyone as a soul. Bro. BK Amar Chand, Sub-Zonal Coordinator in Agra, reinforced that an unbiased media serves as society's backbone, while Dr. Sanjeev Gupta, Associate Professor at MCU Bhopal, noted that because media serves "Food for the Mind," journalists require spirituality to foster true peace. The retreat featured 14 specialized sessions, including plenaries and Raja Yoga meditations, merging ethics with inner stability.

Four offbeat Bengal destinations to visit early

As the festive season approaches, popular tourist hubs across West Bengal prepare for peak holiday rush. For travelers seeking tranquility, scenic landscapes, and cultural heritage without massive holiday crowds, these five offbeat destinations offer ideal pre-festival getaways:

1. Lepchajagats (Darjeeling District)

Perched at an altitude of 6,959 feet amidst dense oak and pine forests, this quiet Lepcha hamlet offers panoramic views of Mount Kanchenjunga. Located just 19 kilometers from Darjeeling town, it serves as a serene retreat for birdwatchers and nature enthusiasts before mountain tourism peaks.

2. Garh Panchkot (Purulia District)

Situated at the foothills of Panchet Hill, Garh Panchkot combines ruined earthen forts, historical temples, and lush forest terrain along the forest cover. It provides a calm weekend escape featuring serene views of the Panchet Dam and surrounding tribal hamlets.

3. Tajpur (Purba Medinipur District)

Nestled between Mandarmani and Shankarpur, Tajpur remains one of the least commercialized coastal stretches in southern West Bengal. Characterized by dense tamarisk groves, red crab colonies, and quiet beaches, it offers a peaceful alternative to heavily crowded coastal towns.

4. Samsing & Rocky Island (Dooars Region)

Located at an elevation of 3,000 feet in the Jalpaiguri foothills, Samsing features sprawling tea gardens and lush forest terrain along the Murti River. Nearby Rocky Island provides riverside camping and nature walks away from mainstream tourist trails.
